

Arachne and Athena

By: Marilyn Singer

Adapted by Fishtank Staff

Arachne

- 1 Competition?
I'm really not fond of
bragging,
but that hag is constantly
5 overpraised.
I don't need to be a daughter of Zeus.
I am already
the goddess of silk.
10 There can never be another of my ilk,
now and forever.
Let her keep trying to win at spinning,
that creature with no fingers
so nimble and clever.
15 Behold how she's fallen from her high position!

Athena

- 1 Behold! How she's fallen from her high position—
so nimble and clever,
that creature with no fingers.
Let her keep trying to win at spinning,
5 now and forever.
There can never be another of my ilk—
the goddess of silk.
I am already
a daughter of Zeus.
10 I don't need to be
overpraised.
But that hag is constantly
bragging.
I'm really not fond of 15 competition.

Arachne was a talented and proud weaver. Athena, goddess of wisdom (and weaving), challenged her to a contest. When Arachne won, Athena was so angry that she changed the girl into a spider.