

Cause and Effect Chart

Cause	Effect
The Pilgrims arrived in the "New World" late in the fall, which was late in the growing season. (Pilgrim Letter 2).	They faced difficulties finding enough food to survive the harsh winter. (Pilgrims , p. 27)
The voyage on the Mayflower and early days on shore were harder than expected. (Pilgrim Letter 2)	Four people had died by the time the Pilgrims reached Plymouth. (Pilgrims , p. 27)
The Pilgrims encountered unfamiliar land, weather, and resources. (The Wampanoag , p. 15)	They had to adapt quickly and figure out how to build homes and grow crops in the new environment. (Pilgrim Letter 2)
The Pilgrims made a treaty with the Wampanoag tribe. (The Wampanoag , p. 16)	The alliance helped the Pilgrims learn how to farm and provided them with food during their early struggles. (The Wampanoag , p. 16)
A baby was born during the Mayflower's crossing. He was named Oceanus Hopkins (Pilgrims , p. 17)	There were some reasons to celebrate during the hard times. (Pilgrims , p. 17)
The Pilgrims were seeking religious freedom when they left England. (Pilgrim Letter 2)	They were able to practice their faith without fear of persecution in the New World (Pilgrims , p. 14)