Conclusion Quick-Write

Writers want to end their story in a way that is entertaining and satisfying for the reader. Craft choices writers use to do this include:

- Resolving the problem while showing a lesson or change.
- Showing how the narrator reflects on the events of the story.
- Leaving the reader with a question to continue to think about.

Think about the final event in your story. Write a conclusion below, thinking about the final event of the story and a craft choice that will leave your reader satisfied and engaged.
