Dear Mateo,

Greeting

How are you? I am excited to share something really important we have been talking about in school. After reading many biographies, I have a strong opinion about who made the greatest impact on the world.

Have you ever thought about who made the biggest impact on the world? I believe that Soichiro Honda made the biggest impact because he created inventions that helped many people in their daily lives. First, he was very determined and learned all he could about machines. He worked his way up from cleaning the floors to garage owner. Next, he was innovative. When gas was expensive after World War II, he came up with the idea to put a motor on a bicycle so people could travel more easily. Finally, his work helped the environment because his vehicles used less fuel and had cleaner exhaust. This made transportation better for people and the planet. For these reasons, Soichiro Honda made the biggest impact on the world.
