

Version 1

When the IED got him in Afghanistan, he became a saint in Springfield. I was supposed to try to be him. That was my role: the All-American boy.

Version 2

When the IED got him in Afghanistan, he became an instant saint in Springfield. I wasn't him. But I was supposed to try. That was my role: the dutiful son, the All-American boy with a fifteen-foot deadeye jumpshot and a 3.5 GPA.

Original

"When the IED got him in Afghanistan, he became an instant saint in Springfield. I wasn't him. I'd never be him. But I was supposed to try. That was my role: the dutiful son, the All-American boy with an All-American fifteen-foot deadeye jumpshot and an All-American 3.5 GPA." (27)

Version 1

When the IED got him in Afghanistan, he became a saint in Springfield. I was supposed to try to be him. That was my role: the All-American boy.

Version 2

When the IED got him in Afghanistan, he became an instant saint in Springfield. I wasn't him. But I was supposed to try. That was my role: the dutiful son, the All-American boy with a fifteen-foot deadeye jumpshot and a 3.5 GPA.

Original

"When the IED got him in Afghanistan, he became an instant saint in Springfield. I wasn't him. I'd never be him. But I was supposed to try. That was my role: the dutiful son, the All-American boy with an All-American fifteen-foot deadeye jumpshot and an All-American 3.5 GPA." (27)

Reynolds, J., & Kiely, B. (2017). All American boys. Atheneum/Caitlyn Dlouhy Books.